Committee on the Rights of the Child

Treaty-specific guidelines regarding the form and content of periodic reports to be submitted by States parties under article 44, paragraph 1 (b), of the Convention on the Rights of the Child*

I. Introduction and purpose of reporting

1. In accordance with article 44 of the Convention on the Rights of the Child, each State party undertakes to submit reports to the Committee on the Rights of the Child on the measures taken to give effect to its obligations under the Convention. The initial report is due within two years of the entry into force of the Convention for the State party, and periodic reports are due every five years thereafter. The present guidelines apply to periodic reports. States parties which have not yet submitted an initial report under the Convention should refer to the guidelines for initial reports.¹

2. The Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography (OPSC) and the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child on the involvement of children in armed conflict (OPAC) require each State party to report on the measures taken to implement the provisions of the respective Optional Protocol.² The initial report under each Optional Protocol is due within two years of the entry into force of the relevant Optional Protocol for the State party. States parties should follow the guidelines specific to the relevant Optional Protocol when drafting their initial reports under OPSC and OPAC.³ States parties that have ratified the Optional Protocols but not the Convention should also follow the guidelines specific to the respective Optional Protocol when drafting their periodic reports under OPSC and OPAC.

3. States parties that have submitted initial reports under the Optional Protocols shall include updated information with respect to the implementation of the Optional Protocols in the periodic reports submitted to the Committee under article 44 of the Convention. In the

* Adopted by the Committee at its sixty-fifth session (13–31 January 2014).

² See OPSC, article 12 and OPAC, article 8.

³ The Committee adopted revised reporting guidelines for the Optional Protocol on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography (CRC/C/OPSC/2) in September 2006, and for the Optional Protocol on the involvement of children in armed conflict (CRC/C/OPAC/2) in September 2007.

present guidelines, sections referring to the Optional Protocols are intended for States parties that have already submitted initial reports under the Optional Protocols.

4. States parties to the Convention that have not yet ratified either or both Optional Protocols should follow the present guidelines for reporting on the implementation of the Convention, and disregard the information relating to the Optional Protocols.

5. The present guidelines, which are specific to the Convention on the Rights of the Child, were developed in accordance with the harmonized guidelines on reporting under the international human rights treaty bodies, including guidelines on a core document and treaty-specific documents (HRI/GEN/2/Rev.6, chap. I), last revised in 2009, and should be applied in conjunction with the guidelines for the preparation and submission of the common core document contained in the harmonized guidelines. The two sets of guidelines together constitute the basis for reporting under the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the Optional Protocols. Reports under the Convention are constituted of two documents: a common core document and a treaty-specific document (referred to as the “treaty-specific report”). The present guidelines, adopted on 31 January 2014, replace those adopted by the Committee on the Rights of the Child on 1 October 2010 (CRC/C/58/Rev.2) and on 3 June 2005 (CRC/C/58/Rev.1).

6. States parties should take into account the general guidance and requirements contained in the harmonized guidelines, in particular those concerning the reporting process (sect. I); the form of reports (sect. II); the content of reports (sect. III); and the reporting process at the national level (para. 45).

II. Common core document

7. The common core document is an integral part of the reports submitted to the Committee in accordance with the harmonized guidelines. It should contain general information about the reporting State; the general framework for the protection and promotion of human rights; and information on non-discrimination, equality and effective remedies. In accordance with General Assembly resolution 68/268 (para. 16), the common core document should not exceed 42,400 words.

8. In general, information in the common core document should not be repeated in the treaty-specific report submitted to the Committee. States parties should update the information in the common core document when they submit a treaty-specific report. In accordance with paragraph 27 of the harmonized guidelines, the Committee may request that the common core document be updated if it considers that the information contained therein is out of date.

9. The Committee underlines that, if a State party has not submitted a common core document or if the information in the common core document is not up to date, all relevant information must be included in the treaty-specific report.

III. Treaty-specific reports

A. Format and content

10. The present guidelines pertain to the preparation of treaty-specific periodic reports. The treaty-specific report should contain information relating to the implementation of the Convention in the reporting State, and the implementation of the Optional Protocols, if applicable. In accordance with General Assembly resolution 68/268 (para. 16), the treaty-specific report should not exceed 21,200 words and should be submitted in Microsoft Word format.

11. The Committee emphasizes that the information provided by the State party regarding the implementation of the provisions of the Convention, and of the Optional Protocols, if applicable, should make specific reference to the Committee's previous relevant recommendations, and include details on how the recommendations have been addressed in practice. Explanations as to why recommendations have not been implemented and details on the principal obstacles encountered should be provided, as well as information on measures envisaged to overcome such obstacles.

12. The treaty-specific report should also contain information on the implementation of the provisions of the Convention and of the Optional Protocols, if applicable, in relation to relevant general comments of the Committee, as well as information of a more analytical nature on how laws, legal systems, jurisprudence, the institutional framework, policies and programmes have an impact on children within the jurisdiction of the State party, according to their different age groups, from early childhood to adolescence, and their special needs. Information in the common core document on the general framework for the protection of human rights should not be repeated.

13. If States parties make a cross-reference in their treaty-specific reports to information contained in the common core document, they should indicate precisely the paragraphs of the core document in which such information is provided.

14. While general statistical information should be included in the common core document, the treaty-specific report should include specific data and statistics, disaggregated by age, sex and other relevant criteria, that are pertinent to the implementation of the Convention and of the Optional Protocols, if applicable. States parties should include statistical information as indicated in the annex to the present guidelines. Statistics should be submitted in separate annexes in one of the working languages of the Committee (English, French or Spanish). Due to resource constraints, the annexes will not be translated.

15. States may submit, separately, copies of legislative, judicial, administrative and other texts referred to in the report, where they are available in one of the working languages of the Committee. Those texts will not be translated nor reproduced for distribution, but will be made available for consultation by the Committee.

16. The treaty-specific report should cover the period from the consideration of the State party's previous periodic report by the Committee to the submission of the current report.

B. Substantive information to be contained in the report

17. The treaty-specific report should contain information according to the "clusters" of rights established by the Committee (see below). The State party should indicate progress made and challenges encountered in achieving full respect for the provisions of the Convention and the Optional Protocols, if applicable. In particular, the State party should provide specific information on actions taken to implement the recommendations in the Committee's previous concluding observations as they relate to each cluster of rights. Information required in relation to the implementation of the provisions of the Optional Protocols are specifically indicated.⁴
